Lisa Novick

California Natives

Why should you care about what types of plants are in your landscape? Wondering what to use? Lisa Novick, author of the “California Native Plants” chapter, SoCal Yard Transformation handbook, will present the beauty and ecological importance of native plants and how their use conserves water and energy. Learn about gardening for support of plant-animal relationships, biodiversity, ecosystem services and our natural heritage. Lisa is the Theodore Payne Foundation’s director of outreach, a credentialed teacher and published writer. Free handbooks will be available or bring your copy—Lisa will be happy to autograph her chapter and answer your questions.

These FREE workshops are a partnership between the University of California Cooperative Extension Master Gardener Program and Western Municipal Water District.
